DEMOCRATS TO TULSA.

State Convention to Assemble There September 1.

Guthrie, Ok., Aug. 28.—Interest among the Democrats throughout the State is rapidly centering in Tulsa, and when the Democratic State Convention meets there next Tuesday, the attendance promises to be second to that of no convention in the history of the State.

The meeting will be much in the nature of a Democratic love-feast combined with the formal opening of the campaign, as there will be nothing for the convention to do except to formulate a platform, and that ought not to be hard to do with the national platform and the splendid record of the Democratic State administration for inspiration.

The citizens of Tulsa are making ample preparations to handle the crowd, and will leave nothing undone to make the convention one long to be pleasantly remembered by every Democrat who attends.

One novel feature of the convention will be the fact that from almost half the counties in the State, there will be no regularly accredited delegates through the failure of the county committee to have such delegates chosen at the primary as is provided by law. From these counties where no regular delegates were chosen, by a resolution adopted at a recent meeting of the State Central Committee, the Democrats attending the convention and residents of such counties, will be entitled to seats in the convention, and will be permitted to cast the full vote of the delegation. This resolution affecting so many counties in the State has a tendency to popularize the convention, and from the present indications, it seems probable in excess of the accredited number of delegates.

Other matters which will tend to increase the attendance is the interest felt throughout the State on the school land question, the New Jerusalem proposition and the dispensary system, all of which will be submitted to the people to be voted on this fall. While it is impossible to estimate the strength of any of these questions, it is an admitted fact that the advocates of all of them will be at the Tulsa convention working to have their pet measure endorsed by the Democratic party of the State. This fact being generally known, has also had the effect of arousing the democrats who are opposing the sale of school lands, the "New Jerusalem" idea and the dispensary, and will help to swell the attendance at the convention.

TEN THOUSAND BLACK BASS.

Dr. Browall is Informed That Assignment of Fish Will Arrive Friday for Reservoir.

Some time ago Dr. Browall wrote Congressman Carter and asked for a quantity of bass to stock the city reservoir. The clever Carter got busy, and as evidence of his success on behalf of the city, the following letter demonstrates:

Neosho, Mo., Aug. 25, 1908.

Dr. H. Browall, Ada, Okla.,

Dear Sir:

A messenger of the Bureau of Fisheries will pass through Ada on train No. 507 at 8:53 p. m., Friday. You are requested to meet the train at the baggage car door promptly on its arrival with can or barrel and receive your assignment of black bass.

Respectfully,
H. D. DEAN, Supt.
Dr. Browall says that he is going to meet the train and that he will immediately take the fish to the water.

DEMOCRATIC RALLY.

City Democrats Meet and Form Bryan-Kern Democratic Club.

Wednesday evening the Ada Military Band drew the crowds toward the court room, and after an entertainment of the crowd by the band, Precinct Committeeman Geo. Thompson, called the meeting to order and stated the object of the meeting was to organize a Bryan-Kern Club, and work for the success of the ticket.

W. C. Edwards was chosen temporary chairman and Sam McClure, temporary secretary. A motion prevailed that the chair appoint a committee of three to enroll the Democrats present as members of the Bryan-Kern Club. Norrell, Ratliff and Carlton Weaver were appointed. The work of forming a permanent organization was then begun and chosen officers: W. H. Ebey, chairman; Jess Warren, vice president, and Carlton Weaver, secretary and treasurer.

A motion carried that the chair this club embrace East and West Ada precincts and Daggs and Capitol Hill precincts.

A motion carried that the chair appoint a committee of five each on resolutions and constitution and by-laws. As chairman of the former J. W. Bolen was appointed and the latter, Tom D. McKeown, was selected. As other members of these committees, Judge Bolen named A. M. Croxson, Edgar Ratliff, W. C. Edwards and W. C. Duncan. Judge McKeown named Duke Stone, D. W. Davis and Geo. Thompson.

Other committees appointed were: On program, Roland, Huffar and McClure. Finance, David, Norrell and Hargis. Membership, Croxton, gis, Swaffer, Davis anetaointaintaoi Hargis, Swaffer, Brown and Chapman.

On motion Congressman Carter was invited to address the Democrats of Ada at a date fixed by himself. The secretary was instructed to write him.

OKLAHOMAN APOLOGIZES.

Dr. Ligon not Addicted to Drink—Creditable and Substantial in his Profession.

There has been more or less interest, some agitation among the ultra radicals and ultra liberals over the occurrence of Dispensary Agent R. E. Haynes refusal to fill a prescription presented by Mr. B. C. King. The prescription for which was written by Dr. Ligon.

Mr. King went before the supreme court for the purpose of securing a mandamus order compelling the Ada dispensary agent to fill prescription. The supreme court has not as yet handed out decision. It appears growing out of the preceeding at Guthrie. The Oklahoman correspondent wrote the special, the character of which is suggested in the article taken from Wednesday's Oklahoman hereunder published.

"A Guthrie dispatch published recently in the Oklahoman regarding an appeal to the supreme court from Ada by Dr. M. W. Ligon, who sought to compel Dispensary Agent R. E. Haines to fill a prescription drawn upon the dispenser, stated incorrectly that Dr. Ligon is a man addicted to drink. A firm denial was made by Dr. Ligon, who was in Oklahoma City last night, and it is substantiated by a statement signed by Agent Haines, who says that the dispatch was untrue in that particular.

The intimation that the agent had repeatedly refused to honor Dr. Ligon's prescriptions was also unfounded, as Dr. Ligon declares that this was the first refusal that had been made.

"This correction is made in justice to Dr. Ligon and his friends, and in reparation of an implied injury to his reputation."

THOMAS LAWSON HAS BEEN ILL.

Wall Street Did Not Know the Financier Had to Keep to His Rooms.

Boston, Aug. 27.—While Thomas W. Lawson's "National stock" has been furnishing a large percentage of the business on the curb stock markets and absorbing four-fifths of the country's financial comment, and while the governing committee is looking into the books of the New York stock exchange firms to discover the source of Saturday's enormous transactions' accredited to "National stock" its author and sole director has been lying acutely ill in Young's hotel.

Not the faintest whisper of Lawson's illness reached Wall or State streets.

"Yes, Mr. Lawson has been sick, very sick," his secretary said. "For two weeks he has been leaving Dreamwood at 5 o'clock in the morning and getting back there at 1 o'clock the next morning. There is a hearing of the curb committee tomorrow morning and Mr. Lawson will preside as usual."

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease. In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. THE SHOE MAN

NEW YORK MODES

By Julia Bottomley

All the windows are abloom with apparel for the two hot months. Windows and window gazers are alike decked out in cool, seductive, and comfortable midsummer toggery. Beginning with hats, Panamas hold the paramount place for outing. They are simply trimmed with big drooping bows of pongee silk, drapes of chiffon, choix of Dresden and Persian ribbons, or with simple woven silk scarves. A variety of shapes is shown, all soft and allowing the brim to turn down protectively over the eyes.

New and Extreme Shapes.
Chips are next in evidence. Naturally we find among them a greater variety in sizes and shapes—crowns bigger, brims wider, than in the elegant but conventional Panama. Ribbons, roses and field flowers—Dresden patterns in ribbon and flowered cretonne are noted on some—others venture as far as net and flower combinations. A pretty example shows a cone-shaped crown swathed with rag-dot net, and this studded with pale yellow sunflowers. Even with this combination the model is a rakish shape and suggests vacation time, framps over the hills and across the fields. These hats are moderate and convenient in size and very light on the head. Some pretty and striking models are trimmed with ribbon with white ruching stretched along one edge. Narrow knife-plaited muli is also used in this way.

CLING TO THE PETTICOAT.
American Women Are Slow to Adopt the "Knicker."

In spite of the pre-eminence of dictionaire modes the petticoat still retains its hold in the affections of American women.
The lingerie petticoat is, in fact, more a thing of beauty now than before its prestige was threatened by the "knicker."
It is developed in batiste and sheer linen and is nearly always finished with a Spanish flounce of lace or embroidery.
This flounce is generally attached by ribbons and the petticoat ribbon has now become an item in woman's dress.
Of late lingerie makers have included dainty in the list of petticoat materials and use it just as they do mulins and sheer muslins.
Dotted awl is still regarded as one of the faintest of materials for the petticoat flounce. And the fanciful bordered effects in this goods are reconciling many women to the faded colored lingerie.
The quality of the ribbons is not restricted and the width is constantly becoming more pronounced.

PALE BLUE CHIP HAT.

Lined with Black, and Trimmed with Plaited Muslin, Edged with Lace.
Pretty Neck Ruffs.
Among the prettiest neck ruffs is the white ostrich-feather bow, tied with soft white ribbon in a bow under the left ear.
White tulle is an excellent substitute that is exceedingly becoming to girlish faces, but a fluffy hat should be the only kind worn with these soft flimsy accessories. Many women seem to forget this, and don one of the pretty ruffs without a thought as to the rest of the toilet, consequently one sees many inharmonious effects.

The large puffed crown of net divides honors with the plain crown of lace. Full plaited brims, or brims lined with ruffles of net edged with lace, make up the fluffiness about the face. A twist of ribbon about the crown, plain or figured, with delicious blurred flowers on a light ground, is made into a full rosette bow at one side. A single rose and bud lie upon the brim. Sometimes a wreath of small flowers and foliage and a twist of black velvet ribbon surrounds the crown.

One of the prettiest models looks like gray lace, but is really made of white point d'esprit plaitings with black laid over the white. A big aigrette in white, with black velvet-ribbon, finish this model.

The Craze for Cretonne.
A craze for cretonne in flowered patterns appears to have seized upon upper tendom. Between these cretonnes and Dresdens in silks and ribbons everything is flowery. Collars, cuffs, belts, bags, parasols and shoes in cretonne, besides the frivolous little coats and parasols of the same material, furnish us a festival of roses. Flowered silks are also used, so like the cretonne that the eye is deceived.

Some small shapes are covered with figured silk laid on plain. Large plain silk-covered frames are bordered with Dresden, in borders an inch and a half wide. The same ideas will reappear in velvet for fall.—Illustrated Milliner.

THE TURBAN AND ITS BRIM.
Popular Headgear Is Seen in Many Different Styles.

The turban, so much in vogue this season, is a round hat with a close-fitting brim that turns perfectly straight upward to a height of from two to four inches. The brim-meets the crown exactly or within a finger space. The turban is flat across the top, the width of the top being from eight to ten inches.

The torador, or Spanish turban, is an exception. The turned-up brim comes only to about two inches of the crown, which is oblong in shape from front to back.

The toque is a jaunty, small hat of many shapes. It may be round like the turban if it have a height of brim rising above the crown on the left side. The back of a toque dips and clings to the head. The front varies in width in different models. It may have a close rolling brim, with a height of seven inches on the left side, receding on the right side to two inches. In this case the crown, separated three inches from the brim, slopes toward the right edge in unison with the brim effect.

Some new toque models have pointed or round effects in front with dents in the sides or the back of the brim.

Toques are seen in the Napoleon hat shapes. There is a great variety in the form of the crown.

Peignoirs Usually Elaborate.
So light is the line between summer tea-gowns and lingerie peignoirs that to the uninitiated it seems almost non-existent. The chief difference is that the negligee, so called, has not even an apology for a collar, and that the tea-gown, although frequently cut V or square in front, is carefully trimmed and so treated that the back of the neck is not exposed. Peignoirs never have coat effects and their sleeves are flowing nondescript affairs, whereas those of a tea-gown are always of a distinct type, such as the puff, the angel or the classic.

The New Overblouse.
There is a modern garment which is neither a coat nor a cape and is called an overblouse. It is worn over a lingerie waist or a muslin frock.

One of the prettiest is built surplice style, is made of Valenciennes lace with bands of old blue flit net. These are almost covered with a design of silk floss the same shade darned in.

Popular Sleeves.
A popular yet simple sleeve for evening dresses is cut straight and even, with the material looped up nearly to the shoulder on the outer side.—Vogue.

Kellen and Miss Van Wyck

By J. W. SCOTT

(Copyright, by Shortstory Pub. Co.)

The Southern Pacific railroad and Rogue river came down the winding gorges of southern Oregon running abreast like wolves on a blood trail by paths that shuffle in and out and cross and re-cross as they drive to the south, ever to the south; and wherever the road sweeps over the river on a bridge the water tugs at the piers to bring it down; and year by year the sweating engines of many thundering trains hoot derision at the turbulent scum of the mountain raging with foam on his lips.

Kellen's division was in this part of the world. He was a conductor, and as he punched tickets from Mokuhlento to Skybelt and from Skagland to Kitswitch he forgot about how the river ran and clutched at the rest of his firewagon, and inwardly cursed the monotony of things and the aridness of life, and prayed a change. He was of the kind of men who take too much interest in too many women. There is always trouble in that, but there is not always a tragedy in the bottom of the bag. His wife had blue eyes, and while she was growing a little bit faded, there was a pathetic, babyish sweetness in her face that would have nailed some men to the foot of her throne throughout the day and the night of all time. But Kellen wanted fire, evidently. The pathos and the babyishness and the sweetness probably wearied him.

When Miss Van Wyck tripped on the coach step and gave him a smile for aid received, out of black eyes burning in a pale face a trifle strained and worn looking, there is no question but that the watcher of men's lives recorded the arrival on the road he traveled of a woman of interest to him.

Kellen owed Miss Van Wyck to the gods of the public school—they led her into the region that knew him. She taught school at Nesqualmie, and when she took up the birch rod there she elevated the window blind and noted down Kellen's train as a means of escape, as it whirled along the river bank by the black water and ripped up the valley.

When she donned the robe of office she did not say: "Here are many little ones to me given that I may mold them into fine vessels as the potter shapes the clay; and that is enough." No. She said: "This place is lonely. I see no young men here. What a vile wilderness."

She knew that she had to ride alone in the summer afternoons, and that the birds and the squirrels chattered horribly; and that the loneliness struck upon her nerves and made her start at shadows. Wherefore she was very dissatisfied.

But she fell upon the device of going up the road to Potlatch, which was almost a town, and possessed a few joys in the way of some women friends and a fresh face once a year perhaps. These flights were made Friday evenings after the children were home for the week, and the home coming befell Sunday nights, so she would be ready for school on Monday morning.

After it had become Kellen's unrighteous custom to stop at her seat, and look into her face, and grin and say something pretty in a voice too low to be caught by the other passengers, the flights got to be regular. And thus there grew up something between them. If you had observed her closely, you would have seen that she watched for him after she took her seat, looking expectantly forward whenever the coach door opened, and that a faint blush put warmth in her white cheeks, and a look sprang into her eyes when he came down the aisle.

It may be he forgot about his wife in talking to her. It does not matter. He did forget about her, and about the vows pledged at the church when she was not so faded; and he made a plan to help Miss Van Wyck kick the dust of Nesqualmie from her shoes forever.

They fixed up between them to go away from Oregon secretly; and he quietly wound up his few business affairs and drew all the money he had in bank. Their plan was to meet in the evening a few miles above Nesqualmie, and from there ride away on horseback together. Miss Van Wyck was to station herself in the woods by the railroad at a grade-foot where his train slackened speed, and he was to drop off the train covertly when it should pass, take the horse she should bring for him, and ride with her 30 miles through the night and the woods to the Oregon coast. Then they were to make Seattle by steamer and train, and go east. Once east they should plan further. For one thing, Miss Van Wyck would thereafter have an escort when she went riding, and she would not have to endure the depressing rain clouds hanging over the Nesqualmie hills. When Mrs. Kellen should see fit to give Kellen a divorce, they would be married. Kellen gave his wife no hints, but left the blow to fall upon her without warning. He wanted his scheme to succeed and to avoid hindrances, and was therefore very cautious.

They selected Friday evening for their departure, notwithstanding the evil devil that presides over that day, because Miss Van Wyck would not be inquired for till Monday morning, when the children should return to school, and that would give them a big start. She told the horse owner of the village from whom she hired the horses that she was going riding down the river to Ballerton with a friend who would call for her at the house where she dwelt—that she had time to make the proper arrangements, while he had not—and accordingly the horses were left at her door.

The owls were hooting in the shadows when she reached the rendezvous at the grade-foot, and the river was growing among the willows. Her nerves were on razor edge when Kellen's train went by, and back among the trees, she jerked her restless horse's bobbing head with aimless and unreasoning viciousness.

But Kellen did not get off as the train skurried along puffing and flashing its lights. Miss Van Wyck sat waiting on her horse a long time, staring after the train and biting her lips, while her heart variously fluttered and sank and stood still. The gloom of the woods increased and was imparted to her soul. She waited stolidly for an hour, hopelessly and wonderingly and then turned toward Nesqualmie.

A quarter of a mile above the trusty spot the Rogue runs between narrow shores like a mad river, and a railroad bridge crosses it there. At the train drew near the bridge, Kellen was seen to go out on the platform and look ahead, according to a custom on his. Later the forward brakeman missed him, and he was found no more upon the train.

Down the river a mile from where he should have dropped off to join Miss Van Wyck with an eager smile on his face, the river spreads out suddenly over a flat in shallows, and here there was a ford leading back to Nesqualmie. Miss Van Wyck rode through the fir trees under the moonlight to this spot, and there she saw something in the river close to the bank, half in and half out of the willow shadows. It was going round and round slowly in an eddy, and its white face was turned up to the moon. No doubt it looked ghastly, for when she galloped into Nesqualmie half an hour later, she was raving and wringing her hands in a state of hysteria. Her nerves had been seriously shocked, and as she swayed and shook in the saddle it was gathered out of her incoherent moanings and self-reproaches that something was wrong at the ford.

Some men went out there, and there they recovered Kellen's body from the river; and they picked up the horse that had been led for him, browsing along the road. Afterward, it was found that a signboard on a post that stood close to the railroad track at the bridge where he disappeared had been twisted half around. It was thought that he leaned too far out and struck that, which was criminally close to the track; and it is probable that at the time when Miss Van Wyck was waiting for him in the grisly timber with parted lips and heaving breast, he was washing heedlessly by, his ears deaf and his eyes blind, in the current of the Rogue.

The horse owner and the nurse who attended Miss Van Wyck through the fever that followed the hysteria, and listened to her delirious babble, furnished information that patched out her story. Kellen was buried at Mokuhlento, where his wife lived, and no one whispered anything to his wife about Miss Van Wyck; so the fading little woman, with the pathetic charged eyes of blue, grieved over him sincerely. The funeral took place while Miss Van Wyck was delirious, and Kellen was some time in his grave when she recovered. This saved her pain, because she could not have gone to the funeral had she been well, being unknown to his wife, and having no recognized ground of acquaintance with him that would have justified it. As soon as she was well she resigned her school and hurried away from Nesqualmie. She now teaches school in the south of California in a bare, flat region where the sun shines all the time. She cannot endure rain, nor clouds, nor mountains, nor woods—and running water in the moonlight turns her sick and shuddering.

"The Deadly Bed."

The story goes that an animated discussion was proceeding as to what is the most dangerous place in the world—the place where one is most likely to meet death. Some persons said a vessel in a storm; some an express train going at full speed down an incline; some the Alps in winter.

Mark Twain, who was present, voted in favor of what he called "the deadly bed"—"Is not that the most dangerous place in the world; do not more people die in bed than anywhere else?"

But while we are laughing at Twain's joke, let it remind us to take good care of this same "deadly bed" which, in spite of the great humorist, is our chief blessing.

The bed should never be made up early; the bedding should be aired in the sun at least once a week, and the mattress frequently turned.

This treatment may not interfere with the ultimate fatality attending the bed, but may help to postpone it.

THE KING AND THE COOK.

She had two sticks to turn them with, And these she gave the king— "Now, sirrah, don't thee let them burn While I the trencher bring."

Alas! poor Alfred, sorely pressed With war and cares of state, Allowed the cakes to burn! The wife Did scold at such a rate.

That Alfred rose: "Behold your king!" She knelt with frightened look. "Nay, rise; it spoileth two good things, To make a king a cook!"

Current Catsup.

Currents are beginning to be plentiful, and within the next week or two the housewife should make currant jelly because of the comparative cheapness of the fruit.

For currant catsup take four pounds of ripe currants, one and one-half pounds sugar, tablespoon ground cinnamon, a teaspoon each salt, ground cloves and pepper. Stew fruit and sugar until thick, add the other things and bottle for use. It is good with cold meat which is too delicate for the strong tomato catsup.

Some Novelties.

A new way to serve peaches is to rub away the fuzz instead of peeling, halve, and take out the stone. Fill with chopped nuts and pile with whipped cream. Or, if salad is wanted, rather than dessert, cover with mayonnaise instead of the cream.

Prune juice which might otherwise be wasted, may be combined with whipped cream, and poured over sponge cake for dessert.

At a Japanese party, make use of the Japanese paper flowers which open when put in water. They can be dropped in the finger bowls or in a glass of water to be quaffed. They will not spoil the water if it is very cold and drunk at once.

A combination salad of radishes and stuffed olives is among the new concoctions. Cut both in round pieces to make change of color.

Put up some pineapple in syrup so thick it can be broken in pieces like candy. Cover with powdered sugar, and serve as an after dinner sweet. This is just as good and cheaper than the candied fruit sold at the confectioner's.

TWO FISHERMEN.

Come on with me and Sam."

"I've caught great cod and halibut That run before the tide." "Why, Grandpa, if I catch some perch You bet, I'm satisfied."

"Away out on the North Sea beach Where herring run in shoals, We'd build a fire, and split the fish And cook 'em on the coals."

"Shucks! Grandpa, Mother always says, If I dig bait and hook 'em, And clean the fish—least she can do Is to flour and salt and—cook 'em!"

A Hint About Ices.

In the first place, if fruit is iced and then fixed up with the beaten whites of eggs it is called "sherbet." And this is the most generally liked form of ice. Ice creams are as popular, but they are not quite the proper thing for a simple, informal affair. They may be served alone, without cake, at an afternoon reception, but it entails other trouble and more refreshments if creams are served.

THE CRACKED CHINA.

We've stored a lot of broken things, As people always do, It saves our consciences to say— "We'll wait and get some glue."

And strange how china never is Entirely intact; I'd like to see a broken dish That hadn't first been cracked.

Some New Wrinkles.

A new way to cook spinach is to boil it first, drain, and put it in enough good stock to cover. Let cook five minutes more. A few bits of green pepper is an improvement.

Those who find watermelon too sickly sweet and insipid, will like a dash of lemon juice sprinkled on just before serving. Sometimes a melon will cause indigestion; if there be added a mere dust of ground ginger there will be no trouble.

When plums are too sour to make good sauce, remove the skins by quickly immersing in hot water, and then boil. It is a little trouble, but is a great improvement.

Pineapple cut in squares and served with mayonnaise is the latest addition to the list of salads.

Another pretty salad is made of fresh currants and slices of oranges served in the orange cups (cut in halves). Sprays of the fresh currants make an attractive garnish.

A Few Timely Tips.

Unexpected company and no dessert! Send to the nearest bakery for cup cakes and serve them cut in two in frappe cups. Pour over them fruit and cream (canned fruit will do), or make a hot lemon sauce.

Place cards for a dinner or formal luncheon have come to be almost a necessity to the fashionable entertainer nowadays. These can be found in infinite variety in the shops and are chiefly made to stand with the assistance of a small wire frame. Home-made cards are, however, prettier, and show off the taste and ability of the hostess. A charming way is to have a small picture of each guest half hidden in a flower.

Chocolate Tapioca.

This affords a variety from the plain tapioca, and as that is a nutritious dish we should spare no pains to make the family eat it.

Make a tapioca custard in the ordinary manner, adding enough grated chocolate to color it a light brown. Bake in a pudding dish and serve with whipped cream or meringue.

DEMOCRATS TO TULSA.

State Convention to Assemble There September 1.

Guthrie, Ok., Aug. 28.—Interest among the Democrats throughout the State is rapidly centering in Tulsa, and when the Democratic State Convention meets there next Tuesday, the attendance promises to be second to that of no convention in the history of the State.

The meeting will be much in the nature of a Democratic love-feast combined with the formal opening of the campaign, as there will be nothing for the convention to do except to formulate a platform, and that ought not to be hard to do with the national platform and the splendid record of the Democratic State administration for inspiration. The citizens of Tulsa are making ample preparations to handle the crowd, and will leave nothing undone to make the convention one long to be pleasantly remembered by every Democrat who attends.

One novel feature of the convention will be the fact that from almost half the counties in the State, there will be no regularly accredited delegates through the failure of the county committee to have such delegates chosen at the primary as is provided by law. From these counties where no regular delegates were chosen, by a resolution adopted at a recent meeting of the State Central Committee, the Democrats attending the convention and residents of such counties, will be entitled to seats in the convention, and will be permitted to cast the full vote of the delegation. This resolution affecting so many counties in the State has a tendency to popularize the convention, and from the present indications, it seems probable in excess of the accredited number of delegates.

Other matters which will tend to increase the attendance is the interest felt throughout the State on the school land question, the New Jerusalem proposition and the dispensary system, all of which will be submitted to the people to be voted on this fall. While it is impossible to estimate the strength of any of these questions, it is an admitted fact that the advocates of all of them will be at the Tulsa convention working to have their pet measure endorsed by the Democratic party of the State. This fact being generally known, has also had the effect of arousing the democrats who are opposing the sale of school lands, the "New Jerusalem" idea and the dispensary, and will help to swell the attendance at the convention.

TEN THOUSAND BLACK BASS.

Dr. Browall is Informed That Assignment of Fish Will Arrive Friday for Reservoir.

Some time ago Dr. Browall wrote Congressman Carter and asked for a quantity of bass to stock the city reservoir. The clever Carter got busy, and as evidence of his success on behalf of the city, the following letter demonstrates:

Neosho, Mo., Aug. 25, 1908.
Dr. H. Browall,
Ada, Okla.,

Dear Sir:
A messenger of the Bureau of Fisheries will pass through Ada on train No. 507 at 8:53 p. m., Friday. You are requested to meet the train at the baggage car door promptly on its arrival with can or barrel and receive your assignment of black bass.

Respectfully,
H. D. DEAN, Supt.

Dr. Browall says that he is going to meet the train and that he will immediately take the fish to the water.

DEMOCRATIC RALLY.

City Democrats Meet and Form Bryan-Kern Democratic Club.

Wednesday evening the Ada Military Band drew the crowds toward the court room, and after an entertainment of the crowd by the band, Precinct Committeeman Geo. Thompson, called the meeting to order and stated the object of the meeting was to organize a Bryan-Kern Club, and work for the success of the ticket.

W. C. Edwards was chosen temporary chairman and Sam McClure, temporary secretary. A motion prevailed that the chair appoint a committee of three to enroll the Democrats present as members of the Bryan-Kern Club. Norrell, Ratliff and Carlton Weaver were appointed. The work of forming a permanent organization was then begun and chosen officers: W. H. Ebbey, chairman; Jess Warren, vice president, and Carlton Weaver, secretary and treasurer.

A motion carried that the chair this club embrace East and West Ada precincts and Daggs and Capitol Hill precincts.

A motion carried that the chair appoint a committee of five each on resolutions and constitution and by-laws. As chairman of the former J. W. Bolen was appointed and the latter, Tom D. McKeown, was selected. As other members of these committees, Judge Bolen named A. M. Croxson, Edgar Ratliff, W. C. Edwards and W. C. Duncan. Judge McKeown named Duke Stone, D. W. Davis and Geo. Thompson.

Other committees appointed were: the program, Roland, Huffar and McClure. Finance, David Norrell and Hargis. Membership, Croxton, gis. Swaffer, Davis and Hargis. Swaffer, Brown and Chapman.

On motion Congressman Carter was invited to address the Democrats of Ada at a date fixed by himself. The secretary was instructed to write him.

The meeting adjourned until the evening of Friday, Sept. 4th, at which time J. W. Bolen and D. W. Hoffer will address the meeting.

OKLAHOMAN APOLOGIZES.

Dr. Ligon not Addicted to Drink—Credible and Substantial in his Profession.

There has been more or less interest, some agitation among the ultra radicals and ultra liberals over the occurrence of Dispensary Agent R. E. Haines refusal to fill a prescription presented by Mr. B. C. King. The prescription for which was written by Dr. Ligon.

Mr. King went before the supreme court for the purpose of securing a mandamus order compelling the Ada dispensary agent to fill prescription. The supreme court has not as yet handed out decision. It appears growing out of the preceding at Guthrie. The Oklahoma correspondent wrote the special, the character of which is suggested in the article taken from Wednesday's Oklahoman hereunder published.

"A Guthrie dispatch published recently in the Oklahoman regarding an appeal to the supreme court from Ada by Dr. M. W. Ligon, who sought to compel Dispensary Agent R. E. Haines to fill a prescription drawn upon the dispenser, stated incorrectly that Dr. Ligon is a man addicted to drink. A firm denial was made by Dr. Ligon, who was in Oklahoma City last night, and it is substantiated by a statement signed by Agent Haines, who says that the dispatch was untrue in that particular.

The intimation that the agent had repeatedly refused to honor Dr. Ligon's prescriptions was also unfounded, as Dr. Ligon declares that this was the first refusal that had been made.

"This correction is made in justice to Dr. Ligon and his friends, and in reparation of an implied injury to his reputation."

THOMAS LAWSON HAS BEEN ILL.

Wall Street Did Not Know the Financier Had to Keep to His Rooms.

Boston, Aug. 27.—While Thomas W. Lawson's "National stock" has been furnishing a large percentage of the business on the curb stock markets and absorbing four-fifths of the country's financial comment, and while the governing committee is looking into the books of the New York stock exchange firms to discover the source of Saturday's enormous transactions accredited to "National stock" its author and sole director has been lying acutely ill in Young's hotel.

Not the faintest whisper of Lawson's illness reached Wall or State streets.

"Yes, Mr. Lawson has been sick, very sick," his secretary said. "For two weeks he has been leaving Dreamwood at 5 o'clock in the morning and getting back there at 1 o'clock the next morning. There is a hearing of the curb committee tomorrow morning and Mr. Lawson will preside as usual."

Served as coffee, the new coffee substitute known to grocer's everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee, will trick even a coffee expert. Not a grain of real coffee in it either. Pure healthful toasted grains, malt, nuts, etc., have been so cleverly blended as to give a wonderful satisfying coffee taste and flavor. And it is "made in a minute," too. No tedious 20 to 30 minutes boiling. R. S. Tobin.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn boys grown back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this terrible disease. In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made. I perfected a dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, I can cure all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. NEW YORK MODES

By Julia Bottomley

All the windows are abloom with apparel for the two hot months. Windows and window gazers are alike decked out in cool, seductive, and comfortable midsummer togethery. Beginning with hats, Panamas hold the paramount place for outing. They are simply trimmed with big drooping bows of pongee silk, drapes of chiffon, echoux of Dresden and Persian ribbons, or with simple woven silk scarves. A variety of shapes is shown, all soft and allowing the brim to turn down protectively over the eyes.

New and Extreme Shapes.
Chips are next in evidence. Naturally we find among them a greater variety in sizes and shapes—crowns bigger, brims wider, than in the elegant but conventional Panama. Ribbons, roses and field flowers—Dresden patterns in ribbon and flowered cretonne are noted on some—others venture as far as net and flower combinations. A pretty example shows a cone-shaped crown swathed with ring-dotted net, and this studded with pale yellow sunflowers. Even with this combination the model is a rakish shape and suggests vacation time, straps over the hills and across the fields. These hats are moderate and convenient in size and very light on the head. Some pretty and striking models are trimmed with ribbon with white ruckling stretched along one edge. Narrow-buffed plaited mail is also used in this way.

CLING TO THE PETTICOAT.

American Women Are Slow to Adopt the "Knicker."

In spite of the pre-eminence of directoire modes the petticoat still retains its hold in the affections of American women.

The lingerie petticoat is, in fact, more a thing of beauty now than before its prestige was threatened by the "knicker."

It is developed in batiste and sheer floun and is nearly always finished with a Spanish flounce of lace or embroidery.

This flounce is generally attached by ribbons and the petticoat ribbon has now become an item in woman's dress.

Of late lingerie makers have included daintily in the list of petticoat materials and use it just as they do muslin and sheer mullins.

Bottled awl is still regarded as one of the daintiest of materials for the floun flounce. And the fanciful bordered effects in this goods are recommending many women to the faded colored lingerie.

The quality of the ribbons is not restricted and the width is constantly becoming more pronounced.

PALE BLUE CHIP HAT.

Lined with Black, and Trimmed with Plaited Muslin, Edged with Lace.

Pretty Negligé Ruffs.
Among the prettiest neck ruffs is the white ostrich feather bow, tied with soft white ribbon in a bow under the left ear.

White tails is an excellent substitute that is exceedingly becoming to girlish faces, but a fluffy hat should be the only kind worn with these soft slimy accessories. Many women seem to forget this, and don one of the pretty ruffs without a thought as to the rest of the toilet, consequently one sees many inharmonious effects.

The large puffed crown of net divides honors with the plain crown of lace. Full plaited brims, or brims lined with ruffles of net edged with lace, make up the fluffiness about the face. A twist of ribbon about the crown, plain or figured, with delicious blurred flowers on a light ground, is made into a full rosette bow at one side. A single rose and bud lie upon the brim. Sometimes a wreath of small flowers and foliage and a twist of black velvet ribbon surrounds the crown.

One of the prettiest models looks like gray lace, but is really made of white point d'esprit plaitings with black laid over the white. A big cigarette in white, with black velvet ribbon, finish this model.

The Craze for Cretonne.
A craze for cretonne in flowered patterns appears to have seized upon upper tendom. Between these cretonnes and Dresdens in silks and ribbons everything is flowery. Collars, cuffs, belts, bags, parasols and shoes in cretonne, besides the frivolous little coats and parasols of the same material, furnish us a festival of roses. Flowered silks are also used, so like the cretonne that the eye is deceived.

Some small shapes are covered with figured silk laid on plain. Large plain silk-covered frames are bordered with Dresden, in borders an inch and a half wide. The same ideas will reappear in velvet for fall.—Illustrated Milliner.

THE TURBAN AND ITS BRIM.

Popular Headgear Is Seen in Many Different Styles.

The turban, so much in vogue this season, is a round hat with a close fitting brim that turns perfectly straight upward, to a height of from two to four inches. The brim meets the crown exactly or within a finger space. The turban is flat across the top, the width of the top being from eight to ten inches.

The toreador, or Spanish turban, is an exception. The turned-up brim comes only to about two inches of the crown, which is oblong in shape from front to back.

The toque is a jaunty, small hat of many shapes. It may be round like the turban if it have a height of brim rising above the crown on the left side. The back of a toque dips and clings to the head. The front varies in width in different models. It may have a close rolling brim, with a height of seven inches on the left side, receding on the right side to two inches. In this case the crown, separated three inches from the brim, slopes toward the right edge in unison with the brim effect.

Some new toque models have pointed or round effects in front with dents in the sides or the back of the brim.

Toques are seen in the Napoleon hat shapes. There is a great variety in the form of the crown.

Peignoirs Usually Elaborate.
So light is the line between summer tea-gowns and lingerie peignoirs that to the uninitiated it seems almost nonexistent. The chief difference is that the negligee, so called, has not even an apology for a collar, and that the tea-gown, although frequently cut V or square in front, is carefully trimmed and so treated that the back of the neck is not exposed. Peignoirs never have coat effects and their sleeves are flowing nondescript affairs, whereas those of a tea-gown are always of a distinct type, such as the puff, the angel or the classic.

The New Overblouse.
There is a modern garment which is neither a coat nor a cape and is called an overblouse. It is worn over a lingerie waist or a muslin frock.

One of the prettiest is built surplice style, is made of Valenciennes lace with bands of old blue flax net. These are almost covered with a design of silk does the same shade darned in.

Popular Sleeves.

A popular yet simple sleeve for evening dresses is cut straight and even, with the material looped up nearly to the shoulder on the outer side.—Vogue.

Kellen and Miss Van Wyck

By J. W. SCOTT

(Copyright, by Shortstory Pub. Co.)

The Southern Pacific railroad and Rogue river came down the winding gorges of southern Oregon running abreast like wolves on a blood trail by paths that shuffle in and out and cross and re-cross as they drive to the south, ever to the south, and wherever the road sweeps over the river on a bridge the water tugs at the piers to bring it down, and year by year the sweating engines of many thundering trains hoot deilish at the turbulent sea of the mountain raging with foam on his lips.

Kellen's division was in this part of the world. He was a conductor, and as he punched tickets from Mokuhlito to Skybell and from Skagland to Kitswitch he forgot about how the river ran and clutched at the feet of his firewagon, and inwardly cursed the monotony of things and the aridness of life, and prayed a change. He was of the kind of men who take too much interest in too many women. There is always trouble in that, but there is not always a tragedy in the bottom of the bag. His wife had blue eyes, and while she was growing a little bit faded, there was a pathetic, babyish sweetness in her face that would have nailed some men to the foot of her throne throughout the day and the night of all time. But Kellen wanted her, evidently. The pathos and the babyishness and the sweetness probably wearied him.

When Miss Van Wyck tripped on the coach step and gave him a smile for aid received, out of black eyes burning in a pale face a trifle strained and worn looking, there is no question but that the watcher of men's lives recorded the arrival on the road he traveled of a woman of interest to him.

Kellen owed Miss Van Wyck to the gods of the public school—they led her into the region that knew him. She taught school at Nesqualmie, and when she took up the birch rod there she elevated the window blind and noted down Kellen's train as a means of escape, as it whirled along the river bank by the black water and ripped up the valley.

When she donned the robe of office she did not say: "Here are many little ones to me given that I may mold them into fine vessels as the potter shapes the clay; and that is enough." No. She said: "This place is lonely. I see no young men here. What a wilderness."

She knew that she had to ride alone in the summer afternoons, and that the birds and the squirrels chattered horribly; and that the loneliness struck upon her nerves and made her start at shadows. Wherefore she was very dissatisfied.

But she fell upon the device of going up the road to Potlache, which was almost a town, and possessed a few joys in the way of some women friends and a fresh face once a year perhaps. These flights were made Friday evenings after the children went home for the week, and the home coming befell Sunday nights, so she would be ready for school on Monday morning.

After it had become Kellen's unrighteous custom to stop at her seat, and look into her face, and grin and say something pretty in a voice too low to be caught by the other passengers, the flights got to be regular. And thus there grew up something between them. If you had observed her closely, you would have seen that she watched for him after she took her seat, looking expectantly forward whenever the coach door opened, and that a faint blush put warmth in her white cheeks, and a look sprang into her eyes when he came down the aisle. It may be he forgot about his wife in talking to her. It does not matter. He did forget about her, and about the vows pledged at the church when she was not so faded; and he made a plan to help Miss Van Wyck kick the dust of Nesqualmie from her shoes forever.

They fixed up between them to go away from Oregon secretly; and he quietly wound up his few business affairs and drew all the money he had in bank. Their plan was to meet in the evening a few miles above Nesqualmie, and from there ride away on horseback together. Miss Van Wyck was to station herself in the woods by the railroad at a grade-foot where his train slackened speed, and he was to drop off the train covertly when it should pass, take the horse she should bring for him, and ride with her 30 miles through the night and the woods to the Oregon coast. Then they were to make Seattle by steamer and train, and go east. Once east they should plan further. For one thing, Miss Van Wyck would thereafter have an escort when she went riding, and she would not have to endure the depressing rain clouds hanging over the Nesqualmie hills. When Mrs. Kellen should see fit to give Kellen a divorce, they would be married. Kellen gave his wife no hints, but left the blow to fall upon her without warning. He wanted his scheme to succeed and to avoid hindrances, and was therefore very cautious.

They selected Friday evening for their departure, notwithstanding the evil devil that presided over that day, because Miss Van Wyck would not be inquired for till Monday morning, when the children should return to school, and that would give them a big start. She told the horse owner of the village from whom she hired the horses that she was going riding down the river to Ballerton with a friend who would call for her at the house where she dwelt—that she had time to make the proper arrangements, while he had not—and accordingly the horses were left at her door.

The owls were hooting in the shadows when she reached the rendezvous at the grade-foot, and the river was growling among the willows. Her nerves were on razor edge when Kellen's train went by, and back among the trees, she jerked her restless horse's bobbing head with aimless and unreasoning viciousness.

But Kellen did not get off as the train skurried along puffing and flashing its lights. Miss Van Wyck sat waiting on her horse a long time, staring after the train and biting her lips, while her heart variously fluttered and sank and stood still. The gloom of the woods increased and was imparted to her soul. She waited stoically for an hour, hopelessly and wonderingly and then turned toward Nesqualmie.

A quarter of a mile above the trysting spot the Rogue runs between narrow shores like a mad river, and a railroad bridge crosses it there. As the train drew near the bridge, Kellen was seen to go out on the platform and look ahead, according to a custom of his. Later the forward brakeman missed him, and he was found no more upon the train.

Down the river a mile from where he should have dropped off to join Miss Van Wyck with an eager smile on his face, the river spreads out suddenly over a flat in shallows, and here there was a ford leading back to Nesqualmie. Miss Van Wyck rode through the fir trees under the moonlight to this spot, and there she saw something in the river close to the bank, half in and half out of the willow shadows. It was going round and round slowly in an eddy, and its white face was turned up to the moon. No doubt it looked ghastly, for when she galloped into Nesqualmie half an hour later, she was raving and wringing her hands in a state of hysteria. Her nerves had been seriously shocked, and as she swayed and shook in the saddle it was gathered out of her incoherent moanings and self-reproaches that something was wrong at the ford.

Some men went out there, and there they recovered Kellen's body from the river; and they picked up the horse that had been led for him, browsing along the road. Afterward, it was found that a signboard on a post that stood close to the railroad track at the bridge where he disappeared had been twisted half around. It was thought that he leaned too far out and struck that, which was criminally close to the track; and it is probable that at the time when Miss Van Wyck was waiting for him in the grisly timber with parted lips and heaving breast, he was washing heedlessly by, his ears deaf and his eyes blind, in the current of the Rogue.

The horse owner and the nurse who attended Miss Van Wyck through the fever that followed the hysteria, and listened to her delirious babble, furnished information that patched out her story. Kellen was buried at Mokuhlito, where his wife lived, and no one whispered anything to his wife about Miss Van Wyck, so the fading little woman, with the pathetic charged eyes of blue, grieved over him sincerely. The funeral took place while Miss Van Wyck was delicious, and Kellen was some time in his grave when she recovered. This saved her pain, because she could not have gone to the funeral had she been well, being unknown to his wife, and having no recognized ground of acquaintance with him that would have justified it. As soon as she was well she resigned her school and hurried away from Nesqualmie. She now teaches school in the south of California in a bare, flat region where the sun shines all the time. She cannot endure rain, nor clouds, nor mountains, nor woods—and running water in the moonlight turns her sick and shuddering.

"The Deadly Bed."

The story goes that an animated discussion was proceeding as to what is the most dangerous place in the world—the place where one is most likely to meet death. Some persons said a vessel in a storm; some an express train going at full speed down an incline, some the Alps in winter.

Mark Twain, who was present, voted in favor of what he called "the deadly bed"—"Is not that the most dangerous place in the world, do not more people die in bed than anywhere else?"

But while we are laughing at Twain's joke, let it remind us to take good care of this same "deadly bed" which, in spite of the great humorist, is our chief blessing.

The bed should never be made up early; the bedding should be aired in the sun at least once a week, and the mattress frequently turned.

This treatment may not interfere with the ultimate fatality attending the bed, but may help to postpone it.

THE KING AND THE COOK.

NCE on a time in history,
A thousand years ago,
The royal Alfred,
England's king,
Was fleeing from the foe.
The rain fell down in torrents—
'Twas a wretched night to roam,
And, drenched and weary, Alfred sought
A humble shepherd's home.
The good wife, by the open fire,
Upon a warm, flat stone
Was frying cakes of corn quite like
Our old-time southern pone.

She had two sticks to turn them with,
And these she gave the king—
'Now, sirrah, don't thou let them burn
While I the trencher bring.'

Alas! poor Alfred, sorely pressed
With war and cares of state,
Allowed the cakes to burn! The wife
Did scold at such a rate,
That Alfred rose: "Behold your king!"
She snelt with frightened look.
'Nay, rise, it spoileth two good things,
To make a king a cook.'

Current Catsup.

Currants are beginning to be plentiful, and within the next week or two the housewife should make currant jelly because of the comparative cheapness of the fruit.

For currant catsup take four pounds of ripe currants, one and one-half pounds sugar, tablespoon ground cinnamon, a teaspoon each salt, ground cloves and pepper. Stew fruit and sugar until thick, add the other things and bottle for use. It is good with cold meat which is too delicate for the strong tomato catsup.

Some Novelties.

A new way to serve peaches is to rub away the fuzz instead of peeling, halve, and take out the stone. Fill with chopped nuts and pile with whipped cream. Or, if salad is wanted, rather than dessert, cover with mayonnaise instead of the cream.

Prune juice which might otherwise be wasted, may be combined with whipped cream, and poured over sponge cake for dessert.

At a Japanese party, make use of the Japanese paper flowers which open when put in water. They can be dropped in the finger bowls or in a glass of water to be quaffed. They will not spoil the water if it is very cold and drunk at once.

A combination salad of radishes and stuffed olives is among the new concoctions. Cut both in round pieces to make change of color.

Put up some pineapple in syrup so thick it can be broken in pieces like candy. Cover with powdered sugar, and serve as an after dinner sweet. This is just as good and cheaper than the candied fruit sold at the confectioner's.

TWO FISHERMEN.

OME, Grandpa, let's go fishin',
'Cross yonder, by the creek.'
'Yes, son, I used to sail the seas
Where e fishin' smacks were thick.
'And oh, if I again could see
The Baltic red with blood;
For where we lads harpooned the whales,
All crimson was the flood.'
'Why, gee whis, Grandpa, there aren't whales down there by Swift's old dam.
But there are sun-fish, blue-gills, too,
Come on with me and Sam.'

'I've caught great cod and halibut
That run before the tide.'
'Why, Grandpa, if I catch some perch
You bet, I'm satisfied.'

'Away out on the North Sea beach
Where herring run in shoals,
We'd build a fire, and split the fish
And cook 'em on the coals.'

'Shucks! Grandpa, Mother always says,
If I dig bait and hook 'em,
And clean the fish—least she can do
Is to flour and salt and—cook 'em!'

A Hint About Ices.

In the first place, if fruit is iced and then fixed up with the beaten whites of eggs it is called "sherbet." And this is the most generally liked form of ice. Ice creams are as popular, but they are not quite the proper thing for a simple, informal affair. They may be served alone, without cake, at an afternoon reception, but it entails other trouble and more refreshments if creams are served.

THE CRACKED CHINA.

ANG! went a crash of crockery
Upon the kitchen floor.
And Ma went out in time to see
A plate in pieces four.
Said sister Kate:
'T'm sorry,
Ma,
But, truly, it was cracked;
I wiped it careful as I could,
Now, honest—
That's a fact.'
Ma watched her with a rueful smile
'I s'pose you'll say: 'Let's mend it.'
You'll put the pieces
On the mantel
To save them
That will end it.'

We've stored a lot of broken things,
As people always do,
It saves our consciences to say—
'We'll wait and get some glue.'

And strange how china never is
Entirely intact;
I'd like to see a broken dish
That hadn't first been cracked.

Some New Wrinkles.

A new way to cook spinach is to boil it first, drain, and put it in enough good stock to cover. Let cook five minutes more. A few bits of green pepper is an improvement.

Those who find watermelon too sickly sweet and insipid, will like a dash of lemon juice sprinkled on just before serving. Sometimes a melon will cause indigestion; if there be added a mere dust of ground ginger there will be no trouble.

When plums are too sour to make good sauce, remove the skins by quickly immersing in hot water, and then boil. It is a little trouble, but is a great improvement.

Pineapple cut in squares and served with mayonnaise is the latest addition to the list of salads.

Another pretty salad is made of fresh currants and slices of oranges served in the orange cups (cut in halves). Sprays of the fresh currants make an attractive garnish.

A Few Timely Tips.

Unexpected company and no dessert! Send to the nearest bakery for cup cakes and serve them cut in two in trappe cups. Pour over them fruit and cream (canned fruit will do), or make a hot lemon sauce.

Place cards for a dinner or formal luncheon have come to be almost a necessity to the fashionable entertainer nowadays. These can be found in infinite variety in the shops and are chiefly made to stand with the assistance of a small wire frame. Home-made cards are, however, prettier, and show off the taste and ability of the hostess. A charming way is to have a small picture of each guest half hidden in a flower.

Chocolate Tapioca.

This affords a variety from the plain tapioca, and as that is a nutritious dish we should spare no pains to make the family eat it.

Make a tapioca custard in the ordinary manner, adding enough grated chocolate to color it a light brown. Bake in a pudding dish and serve with whipped cream or meringue.

DEMOCRATS TO TULSA.

State Convention to Assemble There September 1.

Guthrie, Ok., Aug. 28.—Interest among the Democrats throughout the State is rapidly centering in Tulsa, and when the Democratic State Convention meets there next Tuesday, the attendance promises to be second to that of no convention in the history of the State.

The meeting will be much in the nature of a Democratic love-feast combined with the formal opening of the campaign, as there will be nothing for the convention to do except to formulate a platform, and that ought not to be hard to do with the national platform and the splendid record of the Democratic State administration for inspiration. The citizens of Tulsa are making ample preparations to handle the crowd, and will leave nothing undone to make the convention one long to be pleasantly remembered by every Democrat who attends.

One novel feature of the convention will be the fact that from almost half the counties in the State, there will be no regularly accredited delegates through the failure of the county committee to have such delegates chosen at the primary as is provided by law. From these counties where no regular delegates were chosen, by a resolution adopted at a recent meeting of the State Central Committee, the Democrats attending the convention and residents of such counties, will be entitled to seats in the convention, and will be permitted to cast the full vote of the delegation. This resolution affecting so many counties in the State has a tendency to popularize the convention, and from the present indications, it seems probable in excess of the accredited number of delegates.

Other matters which will tend to increase the attendance is the interest felt throughout the State on the school land question, the New Jerusalem proposition and the dispensary system, all of which will be submitted to the people to be voted on this fall. While it is impossible to estimate the strength of any of these questions, it is an admitted fact that the advocates of all of them will be at the Tulsa convention working to have their pet measure endorsed by the Democratic party of the State. This fact being generally known, has also had the effect of arousing the democrats who are opposing the sale of school lands, the "New Jerusalem" idea and the dispensary, and will help to swell the attendance at the convention.

DEMOCRATIC RALLY.

City Democrats Meet and Form Bryan-Kern Democratic Club.

Wednesday evening the Ada Military Band drew the crowds toward the court room, and after an entertainment of the crowd by the band, Precinct Committeeman Geo. Thompson called the meeting to order and stated the object of the meeting was to organize a Bryan-Kern Club, and work for the success of the ticket.

W. C. Edwards was chosen temporary chairman and Sam McClure, temporary secretary. A motion prevailed that the chair appoint a committee of three to enroll the Democrats present as members of the Bryan-Kern Club. Norrell, Ratliff and Carlton Weaver were appointed. The work of forming a permanent organization was then begun and chosen officers: W. H. Ehey, chairman; Jess Warren, vice president; and Carlton Weaver, secretary and treasurer.

A motion carried that the chair this club embrace East and West Ada precincts and Daggs and Capitol Hill precincts.

A motion carried that the chair appoint a committee of five each on resolutions and constitution and by-laws. As chairman of the former J. W. Bolen was appointed and the latter, Tom D. McKeown, was selected as either members of these committees, Judge Bolen named A. M. Croxson, Edgar Ratliff, W. C. Edwards and W. C. Duncan. Judge McKeown named Duke Stone, D. W. Davis and Geo. Thompson.

Other committees appointed were: the program, Roland, Huffer and McClure. Finance, David Norrell and Hargis. Membership, Croxton, gis. Swaffer, Davis and Hargis. Hargis, Swaffer, Brown and Chapman.

On motion Congressman Carter was invited to address the Democrats of Ada at a date fixed by himself. The secretary was instructed to write him.

The meeting adjourned until the evening of Friday, Sept. 4th, at which time J. W. Bolen and D. W. Huffer will address the meeting.

OKLAHOMAN APOLOGIZES.

Dr. Ligon not Addicted to Drink—Creditable and Substantial in his Profession.

There has been more or less interest, some agitation among the ultra radicals and ultra liberals over the occurrence of Dispensary Agent R. E. Haynes refusal to fill a prescription presented by Mr. B. C. King. The prescription for which was written by Dr. Ligon.

Mr. King went before the supreme court for the purpose of securing a mandamus order compelling the Ada dispensary agent to fill prescription. The supreme court has not as yet handed out decision. It appears growing out of the preceding at Guthrie. The Oklahoman correspondent wrote the special, the character of which is suggested in the article taken from Wednesday's Oklahoman hereunder published.

"A Guthrie dispatch published recently in the Oklahoman regarding an appeal to the supreme court from Ada by Dr. M. W. Ligon, who sought to compel Dispensary Agent R. E. Haynes to fill a prescription drawn upon the dispenser, stated incorrectly that Dr. Ligon is a man addicted to drink. A firm denial was made by Dr. Ligon, who was in Oklahoma City last night, and it is substantiated by a statement signed by Agent Haines, who says that the dispatch was untrue in that particular.

The intimation that the agent had repeatedly refused to honor Dr. Ligon's prescriptions was also unfounded, as Dr. Ligon declares that this was the first refusal that had been made.

"This correction is made in justice to Dr. Ligon and his friends, and in reparation of an implied injury to his reputation."

THOMAS LAWSON HAS BEEN ILL.

Wall Street Did Not Know the Financier Had to Keep to His Rooms.

Boston, Aug. 27.—While Thomas W. Lawson's "National stock" has been furnishing a large percentage of the business on the curb stock markets and absorbing four-fifths of the country's financial comment, and while the governing committee is looking into the books of the New York stock exchange firms to discover the source of Saturday's enormous transactions accredited to "National stock" its author and sole director has been lying acutely ill in Young's hotel.

Not the faintest whisper of Lawson's illness reached Wall or State streets.

"Yes, Mr. Lawson has been sick, very sick," his secretary said. "For two weeks he has been leaving Dreamwood at 5 o'clock in the morning and getting back there at 1 o'clock the next morning. There is a hearing of the curb committee tomorrow morning and Mr. Lawson will preside as usual."

Served as coffee, the new coffee substitute known to grocer's everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee, will trick even a coffee expert. Not a grain of real coffee in it either. Pure healthful toasted grains, malt, nuts, etc., have been so cleverly blended as to give a wonderful satisfying coffee taste and flavor. And it is "made in a minute," too. No tedious 20 to 30 minutes boiling. R. S. Tobin.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease. In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. CHAPMAN
THE SHOE MAN

NEW YORK MODES

By Julia Bottomley

All the windows are ablaze with apparel for the two hot months. Windows and window garners are alike decked out in cool, seductive, and comfortable midsummer loggery. Beginning with hats, Panamas hold the paramount place for outing. They are simply trimmed with big drooping bows of pongee silk, drapes of chiffon, choux of tulle and Persian ribbons, or with simple woven silk scarves. A variety of shapes is shown, all soft and allowing the brim to turn down protectively over the eyes.

New and Extreme Shapes. Chips are next in evidence. Naturally we find among them a greater variety in sizes and shapes—crown bigger, brims wider, than in the elegant but conventional Panamas. Ribbons, roses and field flowers—Dresden patterns in ribbon and flowered cretonne are noted on some—others venture as far as net and flower combinations. A pretty example shows a cone-shaped crown swathed with ring-dot net, and this studded with pale yellow sunflowers. Even with this combination the model is a rakish shape and suggests vacation time, straps over the hills and across the fields. These hats are moderate and convenient in size and very light on the head. Some pretty and striking models are trimmed with ribbon with white ruckling stretched along one edge. Narrow-knife plaited mull is also used in this way.

CLING TO THE PETTICOAT.

American Women Are Slow to Adopt the "Knicker."

In spite of the pre-eminence of diaphanous modes the petticoat still retains its hold in the affections of American women. The lingerie petticoat is, in fact, more a thing of beauty now than before its prestige was threatened by the "knicker." It is developed in batiste and sheer linen and is nearly always finished with a Spanish flounce of lace or embroidery. This flounce is generally attached by ribbons and the petticoat ribbon has now become an item in woman's dress. Of late lingerie makers have included daintily in the list of petticoat materials and use it just as they do muslin and sheer mullins. Dotted awing is still regarded as one of the daintiest of materials for the "knot flounce." And the fanciful bordered effects in this goods are recalling many women to the faded colored lingerie. The quality of the ribbons is not restricted and the width is constantly becoming more pronounced.

PALE BLUE CHIP HAT.

Lined with black, and Trimmed with Plaited Muslin, Edged with Lace.

Pretty Neck-Ruffs. Among the prettiest neck ruffs is the white ostrich-feather bow, tied with soft white ribbon in a bow under the left ear. White tulle is an excellent substitute that is exceedingly becoming to girlish faces, but a fluffy hat should be the only kind worn with these soft filmy accessories. Many women seem to forget this, and don one of the pretty ruffs without a thought as to the rest of the toilet, consequently one sees many inharmonious effects.

The large puffed crown of net divides honors with the plain crown of lace. Full plaited brims, or brims lined with ruffles of net edged with lace, make up the richness about the face. A twist of ribbon about the crown, plain or figured, with delicious blurred flowers on a light ground, is made into a full rosette bow on one side. A single rose and bud lie upon the brim. Sometimes a wreath of small flowers and foliage and a twist of black velvet ribbon surrounds the crown.

One of the prettiest models looks like gray lace, but is really made of white point d'esprit plaitings with black laid over the white. A big aigrette in white, with black velvet-ribbon, finish this model.

The Craze for Cretonne. A craze for cretonne in flowered patterns appears to have seized upon upper tennism. Between these cretonnes and Dresdens in silks and ribbons everything is flowery. Collars, cuffs, belts, bags, parasols and shoes in cretonne, besides the frivolous little coats and parasols of the same material, furnish us a festival of roses. Flowered silks are also used, so like the cretonne that the eye is deceived.

Some small shapes are covered with figured silk laid on plain. Large plain silk-covered frames are bordered with Dresden, in borders an inch and a half wide. The same ideas will reappear in velvet for fall.—Illustrated Milliner.

THE TURBAN AND ITS BRIM.

Popular Headgear is Seen in Many Different Styles.

The turban, so much in vogue this season, is a round hat with a close fitting brim that turns perfectly straight upward to a height of from two to four inches. The brim meets the crown exactly or within a finger space. The turban is flat across the top, the width of the top being from eight to ten inches.

The treader, or Spanish turban, is an exception. The turned-up brim comes only to about two inches of the crown, which is oblong in shape from front to back.

The toque is a jaunty, small hat of many shapes. It may be round like the turban if it has a height of brim rising above the crown on the left side. The back of a toque dips and clings to the head. The front varies in width in different models. It may have a close rolling brim, with a height of seven inches on the left side, receding on the right side to two inches. In this case the crown, separated three inches from the brim, slopes toward the right edge in unison with the brim effect.

Some new toque models have pointed or round effects in front with dents in the sides or the back of the brim.

Togues are seen in the Napoleon hat shapes. There is a great variety in the form of the crown.

Peignoirs Usually Elaborate.

So light is the blue between summer tea-gowns and lingerie peignoirs that to the uninitiated it seems almost nonexistent. The chief difference is that the negligee, so called, has not even an apology for a collar, and that the tea-gown, although frequently cut V or square in front, is carefully trimmed and so treated that the back of the neck is not exposed. Peignoirs never have coat effects and their sleeves are flowing nondescript affairs, whereas those of a tea-gown are always of a distinct type, such as the puff, the angel or the classic.

The New Overblouse.

There is a modern garment which is neither a coat nor a cape and is called an overblouse. It is worn over a lingerie waist or a muslin frock.

One of the prettiest is built surplice style, is made of Valenciennes lace with bands of old blue flit net. These are almost covered with a design of silk does the same shade darned in.

Popular Sleeves.

A popular yet simple sleeve for evening dresses is cut straight and even, with the material looped up nearly to the shoulder on the outer side.—Vogue.

Kellen and Miss Van Wyck

By J. W. SCOTT

(Copyright, by Shortstory Pub. Co.)

The Southern Pacific railroad and Rogue river came down the winding gorges of southern Oregon running abreast like wolves on a blood trail by paths that shuffle in and out and cross and re-cross as they drive to the south, ever to the south, and wherever the road sweeps over the river on a bridge the water tugs at the piers to bring it down, and year by year the sweating engines of many thundering trains hoot decision at the turbulent sea of the mountain raging with foam on his lips.

Kellen's division was in this part of the world. He was a conductor, and as he punched tickets from Mokuliteno to Skybelt and from Skagland to Kitswitch he forgot about how the river ran and clutched at the feet of his firewagon, and inwardly cursed the monotony of things and the aridness of life, and prayed a change. He was of the kind of men who take too much interest in too many women. There is always trouble in that, but there is not always a tragedy in the bottom of the bag. His wife had blue eyes, and while she was growing a little bit faded, there was a pathetic, babyish sweetness in her face that would have nailed some men to the foot of her throne throughout the day and the night of all time. But Kellen wanted fire, evidently. The pathos and the babyishness and the sweetness probably wearied him.

When Miss Van Wyck tripped on the coach step and gave him a smile for aid received, out of black eyes burning in a pale face a trifle strained and worn looking, there is no question but that the watcher of men's lives recorded the arrival on the road he traveled of a woman of interest to him.

Kellen owed Miss Van Wyck to the gods of the public school—they led her into the region that knew him. She taught school at Nesqualmie, and when she took up the birch rod there she elevated the window blind and noted down Kellen's train as a means of escape, as it whirled along the river bank by the black water and ripped up the valley.

When she donned the robe of office she did not say: "Here are many little ones to me given that I may mold them into fine vessels as the potter shapes the clay; and that is enough." No. She said: "This place is lonely. I see no young men here. What a vile wilderness."

She knew that she had to ride alone in the summer afternoons, and that the birds and the squirrels chattered horribly; and that the loneliness struck upon her nerves and made her start at shadows. Wherefore she was very dissatisfied.

But she fell upon the device of going up the road to Potlache, which was almost a town, and possessed a few joys in the way of some women friends and a fresh face once a year perhaps. These flights were made Friday evenings after the children went home for the week, and the home coming befell Sunday nights, so she would be ready for school on Monday morning.

After it had become Kellen's unrighteous custom to stop at her seat, and look into her face, and grin and say something pretty in a voice too low to be caught by the other passengers, the flights got to be regular. And thus there grew up something between them. If you had observed her closely, you would have seen that she watched for him after she took her seat, looking expectantly forward whenever the coach door opened, and that a faint blush put warmth in her white cheeks, and a look sprang into her eyes when he came down the aisle.

It may be he forgot about his wife in talking to her. It does not matter. He did forget about her, and about the vows pledged at the church when she was not so faded; and he made a plan to help Miss Van Wyck kick the dust of Nesqualmie from her shoes forever.

They fixed up between them to go away from Oregon secretly; and he quietly wound up his few business affairs and drew all the money he had in bank. Their plan was to meet in the evening a few miles above Nesqualmie, and from there ride away on horseback together. Miss Van Wyck was to station herself in the woods by the railroad at a grade-foot where his train slackened speed, and he was to drop off the train covertly when it should pass, take the horse she should bring for him, and ride with her 30 miles through the night and the woods to the Oregon coast. Then they were to make Seattle by steamer and train, and go east. Once east they should plan further. For one thing, Miss Van Wyck would thereafter have an escort when she went riding, and she would not have to endure the depressing rain clouds hanging over the Nesqualmie hills. When Mrs. Kellen should see fit to give Kellen a divorce, they would be married. Kellen gave his wife no hints, but left the blow to fall upon her without warning. He wanted his scheme to succeed and to avoid hindrances, and was therefore very cautious.

They selected Friday evening for their departure, notwithstanding the evil devil that presides over that day, because Miss Van Wyck would not be inquired for till Monday morning, when the children should return to school, and that would give them a big start. She told the horse owner of the village from whom she hired the horses that she was going riding down the river to Ballerton with a friend who would call for her at the house where she dwelt—that she had time to make the proper arrangements, while he had not—and accordingly the horses were left at her door.

The owls were hooting in the shadows when she reached the rendezvous at the grade-foot, and the river was growling among the willows. Her nerves were on razor edge when Kellen's train went by, and back among the trees, she jerked her restless horse's bobbing head with aimless and unreasoning viciousness.

But Kellen did not get off as the train skurried along puffing and flashing its lights. Miss Van Wyck sat waiting on her horse a long time, staring after the train and biting her lips, while her heart variously fluttered and sank and stood still. The gloom of the woods increased and was imparted to her soul. She waited stoically for an hour, hopelessly and wonderingly and then turned toward Nesqualmie.

A quarter of a mile above the trysting spot the Rogue runs between narrow shores—like a mad river, and a railroad bridge crosses it there. At the train drew near the bridge, Kellen was seen to go out on the platform and look ahead, according to a custom of his. Later the forward brakeman missed him, and he was found no more upon the train.

Down the river a mile from where he should have dropped off to join Miss Van Wyck with an eager smile on his face, the river spreads out and suddenly over a flat in shallows, and here there was a ford leading back to Nesqualmie. Miss Van Wyck rode through the fir trees under the moonlight to this spot, and there she saw something in the river close to the bank, half in and half out of the willow shadows. It was going round and round slowly in an eddy, and its white face was turned up to the moon. No doubt it looked ghastly, for when she galloped into Nesqualmie half an hour later, she was raving and wringing her hands in a state of hysteria. Her nerves had been seriously shocked, and as she swayed and shook in the saddle it was gathered out of her incoherent moanings and self-reproaches that something was wrong at the ford.

Some men went out there, and there they recovered Kellen's body from the river; and they picked up the horse that had been led for him, browsing along the road. Afterward, it was found that a signboard on a post that stood close to the railroad track at the bridge where he disappeared had been twisted half around. It was thought that he leaned too far out and struck that, which was criminally close to the track; and it is probable that at the time when Miss Van Wyck was waiting for him in the grayly timber with parted lips and heaving breast, he was washing heedlessly by, his ears deaf and his eyes blind, in the current of the Rogue.

The horse owner and the nurse who attended Miss Van Wyck through the fever that followed the hysteria, and listened to her delirious babble, furnished information that patched out her story. Kellen was buried at Mokuliteno, where his wife lived, and no one whispered anything to his wife about Miss Van Wyck, so the fading little woman, with the pathetic charged eyes of blue, grieved over him sincerely. The funeral took place while Miss Van Wyck was delirious, and Kellen was some time in his grave when she recovered. This saved her pain, because she could not have gone to the funeral had she been well, being unknown to his wife, and having no recognized ground of acquaintance with him that would have justified it. As soon as she was well she resigned her school and hurried away from Nesqualmie. She now teaches school in the south of California in a bare, flat region where the sun shines all the time. She cannot endure rain, nor clouds, nor mountains, nor woods—and running water in the moonlight turns her sick and shuddering.

"The Deadly Bed."

The story goes that an animated discussion was proceeding as to what is the most dangerous place in the world—the place where one is most likely to meet death. Some persons said a vessel in a storm; some an express train going at full speed down an incline, some the Alps in winter.

Mark Twain, who was present, voted in favor of what he called "the deadly bed."—"Is not that the most dangerous place in the world, do not more people die in bed than anywhere else?"

But while we are laughing at Twain's joke, let it remind us to take good care of this same "deadly bed" which, in spite of the great humorist, is our chief blessing.

The bed should never be made up early; the bedding should be aired in the sun at least once a week, and the mattress frequently turned. This treatment may not interfere with the ultimate fatality attending the bed, but may help to postpone it.

THE KING AND THE COOK.

She had two sticks to turn them with, and these she gave the king—
"Now, strah, don't thee let them burn
While I the trencher bring."

Alan! poor Alfred, sorely pressed
With war and career of state,
Allowed the cakes to burn! The wife
Did soid at such a rate.

That Alfred rose: "Behold your king!"
She snelt with frightened look.
"Nay, rise, it spoileth two good things,
To make a king a cook."

Currant Catsup.

Currants are beginning to be plentiful, and within the next week or two the housewife should make currant jelly because of the comparative cheapness of the fruit.

For currant catsup take four pounds of ripe currants, one and one-half pounds sugar, tablespoon ground cinnamon, a teaspoon each salt, ground cloves and pepper. Stew fruit and sugar until thick, add the other things and bottle for use. It is good with cold meat which is too delicate for the strong tomato catsup.

Some Novelties.

A new way to serve peaches is to rub away the fuzz instead of peeling, halve, and take out the stone. Fill with chopped nuts and pile with whipped cream. Or, if salad is wanted, rather than dessert, cover with mayonnaise instead of the cream.

Prune juice which might otherwise be wasted, may be combined with whipped cream, and poured over sponge cake for dessert.

At a Japanese party, make use of the Japanese paper flowers which open when put in water. They can be dropped in the finger bowls or in a glass of water to be quaffed. They will not spoil the water if it is very cold and drunk at once.

A combination salad of radishes and stuffed olives is among the new concoctions. Cut both in round pieces to make change of color.

Put up some pineapple in syrup so thick it can be broken in pieces like candy. Cover with powdered sugar, and serve as an after dinner sweet. This is just as good and cheaper than the candied fruit sold at the confectioner's.

TWO FISHERMEN.

"I've caught great cod and halibut
That run before the tide."
"Why, Grandpa, if I catch some perch
You bet, I'm satisfied."

"Away out on the North Sea beach
Where herring run in shoals,
We'd build a fire, and split the fish
And cook 'em on the coals."

"Shucks! Grandpa, Mother always says,
If I dig half and hook 'em,
And clean the fish—least she can do
Is to flour and salt and—cook 'em!"

A Hint About Ices.

In the first place, if fruit is iced and then fixed up with the beaten whites of eggs it is called "sherbet." And this is the most generally liked form of ice. Ice creams are as popular, but they are not quite the proper thing for a simple, informal affair. They may be served alone, without cake, at an afternoon reception, but it entails other trouble and more refreshments if creams are served.

THE CRACKED CHINA.

We've stored a lot of broken things,
As people always do,
It takes our consciences to say—
"We'll wait and get some glue."

And strange how china never is
Entirely intact;
I'd like to see a broken dish
That hadn't first been cracked.

Some New Wrinkles.

A new way to cook spinach is to boil it first, drain, and put it in enough good stock to cover. Let cook five minutes more. A few bits of green pepper is an improvement.

Those who had watermelon too sickly sweet and inept, will like a dash of lemon juice sprinkled on just before serving. Sometimes a mellow will cause indigestion; if there be added a mere dust of ground ginger there will be no trouble.

When plums are too sour to make good sauce, remove the skins by quickly immersing in hot water, and then boil. It is a little trouble, but is a great improvement.

Pineapple cut in squares and served with mayonnaise is the latest addition to the list of salads.

Another pretty salad is made of fresh currants and slices of oranges served in the orange cups (cut in halves). Sprays of the fresh currants make an attractive garnish.

A Few Timely Tips.

Unexpected company and no dessert? Send to the nearest bakery for cup cakes and serve them cut in two in frappe cups. Pour over them fruit and cream (canned fruit will do), or make a hot lemon sauce.

Place cards for a dinner or formal luncheon have come to be almost a necessity to the fashionable entertainer nowadays. These can be found in infinite variety in the shops and are chiefly made to stand with the assistance of a small wire frame. Homemade cards are, however, prettier, and show off the taste and ability of the hostess. A charming way is to have a small picture of each guest half hidden in a flower.

Chocolate Tapioca.

This affords a variety from the plain tapioca, and as that is a nutritious dish we should spare no pains to make the family eat it.

Make a tapioca custard in the ordinary manner, adding enough grated chocolate to color it a light brown. Bake in a pudding dish and serve with whipped cream or meringue.
